TO THE PUBLIC!

On and after May 4, 1896, the working force of our establishment will be granted the full benefit of the Eight-Hour System. We believe we have succeeded in solving the problem, so that neither our employes nor our patrons will suffer any hardship by the arrangement.

One-half of our employes will begin work daily at 8 a. m. and quit work at 5 p. m., and one-half will begin work daily at 9 a. m. and quit work at 6 p. m.

Thus our patrons will not be prevented from doing their shopping during the cool of the day in summer, nor be subjected to the annoyance which late opening and early closing would carry with them at all seasons.

Our establishment will be open on Saturday nights until 9:30 o'clock, as usual, and ample provision will be made for our employes whenever they are called upon to serve us during extra hours.

We have reason to believe that all those associated with us in business will cheerfully acquiesce in this arrangement, as it will give them an alternate weeks the privilege of taking such recreation, mornings or evenings, as they may desire.

The only persons connected with our establishment who will devote more than eight hours daily to business, without additional compensation, are the members of the firm.

Our store will therefore be open for the transaction of business from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily, and from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m. on Saturdays. Our patrons will please bear this in mind.

Wishing success to any movement which aims to better the condition of the working classes, and to the Eight-Hour Movement in particular, we have the honor to subscribe ourselves,

GAS FIXTURES

The Tribune.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

TERMS TO ADVERTISERS.

PUBLISHED EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

SUNDAY, MAY 2, 1886.

Yesterday barley here for the season, and several brewers, we hear THE DAILY TRIBUNE mailed to them, prepaid, for 75 cents per month, and, with the Sunday edition, 85. THE DAILY TRIBUNE will be sent to any address in Europe at $1.50 per month, with Sunday the extra postage.

THE total imports of general merchandise at New York during the last week were the largest of the season, exclusive of dry goods.

STARIN & DUNN, barge-line merchants of Baltimore, made an assignment yesterday for the benefit of their creditors. The liabilities are $75,000.

THE PHILADELPHIA GAS TRUST COMPANY yesterday declared a semi-annual dividend of 2½ per cent each and most of their bonds, payable May 15, or registered April 15.

THE President has approved the bill authorizing the bust for celebrating the records of the Union Commissioners of Alabama Claims for a period of two months.

CHARLES FRANCOIS SAVARESAN, THE eminent Episcopal Bishop of the Diocese of Illinois, died in St. Louis at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. The Bishop had been confined to his bed for a number of weeks suffering with a complication of diseases. The funeral will take place next Wednesday.

WOLF & LOWENSTEIN, shoe manufacturers of Cincinnati, have assigned. The assets are estimated at $50,000; liabilities, $70,000. There were no preferences. The failure is ascribed to serious depression in the country, especially labor, and the shrinkage of values.

THE new assessment, issued yesterday, shows the collection of the public debt during the month of April to be $12,000,000 ct., and the total sum in the Treasury $200,000,000.

AT 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon Clark T. J. Barnes, one of the earliest and best known residents of St. Paul, fell dead on the street from heart-disease. He was 70 years old.

THE Treasury agents have done a good of to good valid To a discussion of the eight-hour question from various points of view, chiefly by persons who sympathize with the movement, and why have stated their side of the case with fullness and earnestness. Among those who take part in this discussion are Henry George, the political economist; General Gompers of the Federated Council of Trades; John Jarrett, the President of the Amalgamated Iron and Steel Association; T. V. Powderly, the head of the Knights of Labor; the Rev. William D. Kelley, Irving Browne, the journalist, Reverend Leonard Bacheller, the Rev. Robert Collyer, and a number of Congressmen and legislators. As the report for three of representative men, their reasons thoughtful personal, whether the moral sphere with them or not.

THE factory-worked map quite. Board of Trade here for May were placed, in this city at 43,027 per cent. Shifting unchanged was strong. Investment securities were dull. The New York stock market was active, with a downward tendency.—The Chicago produce markets were pleasantly lively, spread on cable for the week, which was depressed by panic of more being declared out of politics in New York. Loan associations were buying the advantage of wheat for May, and about 500,000 bushels were taken, prominently for shipment. As compared with Friday, pork closed 10 cents higher, lard 12½ cents higher, meats 5 cents higher, wheat and oats ½ cent higher, corn ¼ cent lower for May, rye steady, barley easy, and domestic ½ cent higher. The shipments of last week consist of the receipts by 600,000 bushels in wheat and were low by 180,000 bushels in corn. The packing of hog-city during the last two months includes 407,000 hogs, against 547,000 for the same time last year and 613,000 for 1884.

IF the advocates of the country should be forced to adopt the system of two or twelve hours' pay for eight hours' work it would add about $150,000,000 to their working expenses. Of course, this vast amount would be charged back on the merchants and shippers, and therefore, and this would soon simply that the people would have to pay $150,000,000 more than at present for the products and commerce of the commercial by railroad. The only alternative would be for the people to halt and deny themselves so much as now. Many would take this course, and a portion of the losing would be thrown back on the railroads. Cheap and bulky would be greatly cut down, and a close economy would become necessary in all departments of the service. Fewer hands would be required, and the services of thousands of conductors, freighters, sleepers, lamplighters, trackmen, freight-handlers, etc., would be dispensed with, the private cracks being higher-priced goods for consumers, making room for farmers, and less employment for labor. Even the men fortunate enough to have their employment spared have to pay more for their food and clothing and live harder and poorer than before. The cheaper would prove a hardship to all, a benefit to none. Unless all the accepted definitions of political economy are a stumbling-block and fallacious, the change will prove a clear hardship and disappointment to the men who have been led to think they can improve their condition by bringing it about.

OFFICERS OF THE ASSOCIATION DIFFERENT.

It is not probable that the present excited state of the eight-hour movement will continue for any great length of time. Americans are the easiest people in the world to compromise difficulties, less accustomed compromise, and deal with the inevitable in the best possible manner. Instead, therefore, of declaring an industrial war and making organized resistance to the eight-hour system, it is probable that in a short time workmen, and manufacturers, and others will effect some compromise and proceed to business in accordance with its requirements. The readiness of the people to adapt themselves to new conditions and the great recuperative powers of the country enable the United States to meet industrial changes that would prove revolutionary and relative to almost any other nation.

The people have not forgotten the experience of the War period, in dealing with wild fluctuations in money and prices. The employer and manufacturer as soon as they recover from their first surprise will begin to readjust their business in accordance with the new condition of affairs; they will prepare for a shortened interval by cutting down expenses as much as possible and declaring no dividends; they will seek by the power of goods to get more or more to serve the increased cost of labor, and proceed carefully and cautiously until the entire reason why has passed through the process of readjusting and changing back. Everyone will buy as little as possible of high-priced city goods, and will reduce their production in the hope that scarcity will cause better prices. Clothing, bedding, furniture, fuel, and all articles produced in the eight-hour trades will advance 10 to 20 per cent in a short time. Foreign as all railroads will advance, and those also, the effect of which will be to hurt business. Industry will be depressed and times will grow hard until the readjustment is completed, and when that, unfortunately, the eight-hour laborers will find the cost of living increased 10 to 20 per cent and their available to no way improved. In the meantime many will lose their employment altogether on account of bad times. Competition in the labor market will be increased by the tardes of immigrants attracted to this country by the alluring but deceptive promises of the eight-hour day with the hated day—the per going on, two hours each day after the more go home.

A combined production caused by a decreased demand and a forced advance of 20 per cent in prices constitutes a severe trial for any nation, but the United States might under the change if it could deal with it in and for itself and without having to face a desperate combine. It is the alien element that and for the most necessity. Before a year the eight-hour workmen will find themselves with only four-fifths of the comforts and conveniences they were accustomed to enjoy when working ten hours on account of low to the permanent power of their wages. This would fall in general dissatisfaction. Labor Commissioners will have their brethren have been deprived of the sufferers have the of the eight-hour day, and the dissatisfaction and disappointment will be reflected in strikes to get higher wages, and long work. Persistence, attempted by the report of an eight-hour day and getting less pay to find the labor market overstocked and employment hard to get, will increase the strength of the Communistic element, which may be seldom alert by the excitement of many others to a love of turbulence, disappointment and discomfort. If the eight-hour movement could only produce the results anticipated by its advocates the movement would amply atone itself to the taxpayers and intelligent Philanthropists, and finally appreciate itself as making the shower, but it is the bitter disappointment in store for the workmen which its thoughtful men with anxiety. The real crisis will come when the eight-hour system has worked out to inevitable effects of inducing prices and reducing demand and labor. To put end of daily product available and accounting only from the hours. Looking out to the immediate effects of the eight-hour system, but to its final consequences in deepening the bitter discontent of the workmen, thoughtful men cannot contemplate the misery with which they regard the future.

PROGRESS AT HARVARD.

The wave of progress seems to be rushing up against the very front of that old, conservative institution, Harvard College. Under the new system, which places the election of courses in the hands of the student, the majority of several of the classes, are graduated, have joined in a letter to the recommendations during their closing term on such questions as which they will be expected to act. These questions include voluntary attendance on morning prayers, the optional determination in Greek as a condition of admission, the admission of women to the medical and other professional schools, and the abolition of the marking system.

The Boston Herald summarizes the views of the nine candidates in the matter of morning prayers, and all of them, with one exception, oppose themselves as opposed to compulsory attendance. One Bell, James Freeman Clarke says that continued prayer as such a service is subversive to genuine religious exercises. Dr. Charles E. Grinnell affirms that voluntary morning prayers fail to with true sincerity and honesty to religion. Mr. Francis Calvert Lowell goes still further, and believes that compulsory attendance is "productive of little good and of considerable religious injury." These opinions fairly reflect those of the others, and the Herald says that they express a fair average of the judgment that prevail in regard to college prayers among all Harvard men who "believe in the rule of freedom, but not to the view that the university shall entirely separate historical from moral education."

Harvard has evidently made a good start on her new departure, and may yet put down to a practical basis. Compulsory religion is no better than compulsory Greek and has as more efficacy than a Greek verbal. Now that she has done away with both of them, by the compulsory means, she will be likely to make healthy progress and turn out some young men with something more than the virility and stamina of a Greek root. As to the female professional education, that is a matter of an entirely different kind, but, having made one successful stride, she might add theological, legal, and medical courses without danger to the respective curriculum. As to the working, that is an antiquated system which is very unfit to inflict advice, the reverse of useful, but is of no practical use to college and other institutions and educators, as it often happens that the greatest success to a class-mate of the best averages. If the master which David Webster received in college had been the test of his subsequently he would have been no doubt as an ignoramus. It is a good sign that these old-fashioned barriers are being removed one after the other and that Harvard is broadening her privileges. What she must needs, however, is a first-class manual-training school, so that the young men whom she turns out into the world may have some show even of making a living. At present, when they stand upon her threshold for the last time, the majority of them are intellectual vagrants, not knowing which way to turn, and physical incapables, unable to earn their single living they want. A manual-training school would serve a large number of them from the dry-goods counters, the gilt-tile in Wall street, and the dangers of living on their wits.

THE TRAGEDY OF REAL ESTATE.

A dispatch from New York to THE TRIBUNE a few days ago described the engineering and operative methods of transferring real estate in that city and pointed out some efforts were being made to reform it. There has been from time to time of late a general demand throughout the country for a simplification of the methods of transferring realty, but it has met with a good deal of opposition from the "conservative classes"—shrewd lawyers, and others whose fees would be cut down—and no very important steps have yet been taken. Those who have not made a fetish of precedent, and who believe that law is useful only as a means toward an end, the unfavorable future almost this branch of business make very clear. Banks and registered bonds change ownership by an indictment and record on the backs of the attorney, the work of a moment; coupon bonds are simply paid for and handed over; accurate conveyances to add to the million dollars' worth every day without a scrap of paper to show that it has left the store to go into consumption. Only realty is burdened with a thousand complications to transfer that render it necessary to have an army of abstract clerks, lawyers, and experts to prevent mistakes and fraud. It takes twelve more machinery to effect the sale of a piece of real estate worth $50,000 than to make a sale of bonds supporting to $1,000,000. There is the labor to trace up the property; the advertisement to obtain the records that make a report after three or four weeks (for a handsome consideration); the lawyer to see that the abstractionist has done his work well and to point out "clouds" and "flaws" half of a quarter of a century old; the notary public to swear people; and the Recorder of Deeds to attach a long, tedious, and expensive ceremony. Even after all this is done the buyer is not sure that he is secure for not the real owner of the property. There are divers claims, widow of minor children, tax claims, special assessments, mechanic's liens, and an end of other dangers threatening the owner. And he is never sure that these dangers have been removed. In any case half a dozen years undisturbed by absent lawyers, and then suddenly may take a notion that he has title! But Uncle Sam, by imposing a stamp on his title, and Illinois or somewhere to the thousands of a stockholder follows. Such things and an answer to real-estate holders that this preposterous arrangement have been inflicted in favors without question of their property. They are a necessary evil, but they but stamp in the end to accept the same of buying or selling land on registration is good but at the present rate about of times they are needed. It is an interesting documentary on the vast amount of unfinished labor bestowed on conveying rights to real estate that such rights are worth more frequently assessed than the labor in any other kind of property. It is surely time there is any change as to the rights owner of securities, but litigation as to the ownership of realty is one of the commonest of human experiences. It would seem, then, that the very evil that its anticipation have thrust to prevent—the danger of being robbed—is one of the conditions to which the owner of property is subject.

Recent efforts towards reform in this city have had in view mainly a more simplification of methods and reduction in the expense of examining titles. That is a very good thing as far as it goes. Everybody is familiar with the necessary expense often incurred in getting an abstract that a painful surprise will spring. There are plenty of cases in which the cost is nearly as great as the value of the property, and cases in which it would be greater and hurt the owner than an unsuccessful title that is not evil. But the trouble is further back. The law needs a thorough overhauling. There is a twenty-year statute of limitations. A clause of the provisions of that statute is not necessary to show that it is altogether inadequate. Everybody experience shows that. It does not save persons from ruinous litigation. It does not prevent the clouding of titles that results in the way of so many transactions in realty. There are hundreds of pieces of property in this city which would be brought by legislation and improved not for years on the title that either might serve to have received as might be have been repaired by the last years ago. Some of the reports show that a limitation might be the proper at the time of the great fire in this city, and others that five or ten years would be ample for most purposes. Certain it is that everything should be done, and lawyers and real-estate brokers would insist themselves. The law-making system is decidedly worth investigation. In that society really is transferred practically as stocks are transferred here, and the Government guarantees the rights of the persons to whom the land is taxed. The system has worked admirably there for a score of years. It is a real improvement on our method, at least so far as facility of transfer is concerned, and the expense is slight. It is by no means certainly to us that our conveyance system has turned so long.

THE CITY WATERWORKS TUNNEL.

Public Commissioner Du Wolf says with great positiveness that of the contemplated work of the city is done by contract this year. Instead of being done by the forced labor-system of the Aldermen, as it has been done for some time, to will, in order to save the taxpayers $50,000, and will guarantee that the work will be done efficiently. Some of the Aldermen—men of large experience with contract work—say that Mr. Du Wolf's estimate of the saving is too small—that $100,000 can be saved. This is probably true. But supposing that only $50,000 can be saved, that is a considerable sum, and no honest public officer should stand in the way of the saving. A majority of the Public Commissioner of the Council, acting on the recommendation of the Public Commissioner, have resolved in favor of the contract system. But a minority report in favor of the old system has been signed by Ald. Wenzel and Ald. Frey. Wenzel's opposition in favor of wasting $50,000 of the public money will not surprise any citizen of Chicago who knows even a little of the history of that worthy, but will "Stupendous" Stupendous adherents of Wenzel's report. Ald. Frey's signature of Wenzel's report. Ald. Frey's signature would have been obtained under a misapprehension on his part. He is reported to be an honest man. He was elected in a strongly Democratic ward over the regular nominee on a reform issue. He will probably withdraw his signature from the Wenzel report.

Action on the majority report will come up tomorrow night. The people will watch the vote on the adoption of the contract system with interest. The real question at issue will be, Shall $50,000 or more of the public money be saved, or shall it be squandered that the health Aldermen may be enabled to pay of their political debts to need workers and honored who may be the owners of "honeyed tongue"? There will be no excuse to evade the issue. A vote in favor of the contract system is a vote in favor of economy; a vote against it is a vote in favor of jobbery and political corruption. There are eleven votes now in the Council who always vote against the public interest and in favor of corrupt methods of city administration. They will vote upon one night in favor of perpetuating the old rotten system of extravagant work. There are at least twenty-five Aldermen in the Council who have long stated that "doing given schemes plunder that their votes would be cast in favor of economy and honesty. If any one of these men should vote with the corruptionists and bonds Aldermen tomorrow night he would not be surprised if he, too, is classed as a heedless and unprincipled, and if his constituents take the earliest opportunity to treat him as such and punish him.

Let us have a fair, square vote on the question however night, so that we may be able to separate the sheep from the goats—the honest Aldermen from the corruptionists.

EMPLOYING LABOR AT HOME.

The eight-hour strike is at last upon us. Probably 50,000 men will be idle for a week who were at work last week. Many employers are uncertain what to do, because they were not actively expecting what has happened. When the eight-hour movement was inaugurated, and from that time almost to the 1st of May, it was given out that it was to be a movement for a reduction of working time from ten hours to eight hours' wages; there was no question of wages involved. In all their papers, their speeches, and their associations—including with the exception of Master Workman Powderly—employers were given to understand that it would be eight hours' work for eight hours' pay, and that the object of the movement was to obtain two more hours for social and moral improvement, as well as leisure for rest and entertainment. They wanted to be better scholars, to be better Christians, to get themselves in the way of acquiring more information, and to improve their state of knowledge, and become better citizens. Had they confined themselves to this demand they would be more likely to succeed. The really instructive men who had been employers in the movement, the Powderlys, and the Gompers, and the Jarretts, would be heroes if the city were to receive very appreciable benefit. But the city does not. They are regarded as cranks, and the great majority of the workingmen who have struck for eight hours' pay for eight hours' work, do not believe a word of anything the accompanying power of organization connected with the reduction of work. The working classes will be the loving sufferers in consequence. The intelligent public, including the masters, and of the employing power of the farmers, and of the employing power of the farmers. The farmers, indeed, believe the strike. The advocates of prices will check the demand for manufactured articles from the consumers. The consequence, inevitably the farmers will not be able to the increased cost because they will not have the money to pay for them. The farmers have discovered and that their interests are identical with those of the workingmen, and that their success depends upon the success of the workingmen in securing long wages. The farmers will not be able to pay the increased cost of labor, and they will not be able to pay the increased cost of labor, and they will not be able to pay the increased cost of labor, and they

BREWERS AND BOTTLERS TREATING WITH UNION EMPLOYES.

They Will Allow Them Fifteen Cents Daily, with Other Things—What the Manufacturers Among the Packers—Position of the Bottling Firms—Trade Manufacturers Will Not Yield—The Suit on Sunday Sales—No Strike Yet—The Fullman Situation—Some Eighteen-Cents.

A committee of the Association Employers' and Assistant Clerks, No. 1, of Chicago, which is restricted to the Central Labor Union, the Anheuser organization, called on the brewers at their association office in the Metropolitan Block yesterday afternoon. John A. Kratzer presided and every member was present.

The committee submitted the following document:

Owing to the imminent need of effort in the summer months, which is propagated now in the hot days and active workers and assistants have been in the most earnest care of their clients to the good, and to have interests and other employers' efforts, and after a careful consideration the task of North Chicago's organization under the name of the Employers' Beer Bottlers' and Assistant Union, No. 1, of Chicago, Cook County, Ill., is hereby formed, and the following rules for the interests and welfare of its members and assistants:

THE MOVEMENT NOT AN UNMIXED BLESSING WHAT HAVE ACCRUED.

Decisive Action by the Trades-Unions—To Have Influence the Seventh Ballot, Held in a Large Number Before Adjourned—A Manifesto Issued—Resolutions to Declare Eight-Day Week Should Trouble Ensue—The Thousand Men Out in Baltimore and the Four-Thousand Out in Milwaukee—Hods for the Workmen to Tote a Few Items.

Objections received by the Tribune this week against the attempt of Chicago the movement by the eight-hour men for the adoption of a rule making eight hours a day's labor was not so general as had been expected. There appeared to be no dissent of notice among the workmen, and in very many cases—Manufacturers and the managers of the business generally—the movement was looked upon favorably. In fact, many manufacturers and bosses of these avowed their intention to grant the eight-hour request. Some of the leading manufacturers of the city, however, have not yet given their decision. There is to be a general conference between the Executive Committee of the Federation of Labor and the committees representing the various trades, and then the matter will be definitely settled. Below will be found the latest developments in the movement, as gathered by Tribune reporters:

Decisive action was taken by the Trades-Union of this city last night, looking to the adoption of the eight-hour system for the workmen of Chicago. The meeting was held at the Arbeiter Hall, on Lake street, and was attended by delegates from all the trades-unions in the city. The meeting was called to order by President Fahrney, and the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we, the Trades-Union of Chicago, in mass meeting assembled, do hereby declare that on and after May 1, 1886, eight hours shall constitute a day's labor, and that we will not work more than eight hours per day after that date.

Resolved, That we will support by moral and financial means all trades, workmen, labor bodies, bureaus, papers and editors who favor the adoption of the hours in the strike in an hostile manner.

Resolved, That we will not work for any employer who refuses to accede to the eight-hour request after May 1, 1886

The London Newspapers Unite in Writing Down the Short-Time Artists Work in the Exhibition—What Critics Discover Which of Art and Its Devotees in America—Sunbeams in Shining Order at the Royal Academy's Pictures—Angus Evans Mannerisms—General Gossip.

LONDON, May 2.—[By Cable.]—The Academy exhibition is the best investment in many years in respect to the attention of critics of the best order of wares. The newspapers and the better-class magazines now rather shun the old to the strength of quality which they display, owing to the to-crowded space given to them. A quantity of the best of the best writers is given to other exhibitions and into the endless theaters' shops, so that the Academy exhibition, a department of a great many canvases which would do credit to almost the greatest men. A number of artists, as a genius, represents against the British material wrought last year, and studies of the nude in preference to other subjects. It is apparent that the Committee on Selection object, as one person of the sort, and engagement the artist to exist to a less nude. The artist replied that his picture was a decent one, and nothing morality in any way was that he would not touch it. He added that he would be glad as the present, and not under the influence of outside critics. Wagner's best exhibition is bright and gold within the canvas with the academy. It contains about seventy works.

ENGLAND AND IRELAND.

ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE — THE NEWS OF RECONCILIATION.

Lord Hartington and His Supporters Party —Why He Cannot Do Anything—His Land Purchase Bill—Only Twelve Years for Present Rental to Be Paid.

The text of Mr. Gladstone's speech on the Irish Land Purchase bill attracts by some touches with regard to the purchase price to the old landlords. The demanded price is not merely twice the present rental, but it is nearly twice the present value, as it is nearly twice the actual cash value of the farms of the present tenants—without taking into account the enormous increase of value which the tenants themselves have given to their holdings by the improvements of their own labor and capital. The Irish tenant has not only paid for the land, but has paid for it twice over. The present bill will attempt to make him pay for it a third time. The Irish tenant has not only paid for the land, but has paid for it twice over. The present bill will attempt to make him pay for it a third time.

Lord Hartington's own speech shows the weakness of his own and his colleagues' position. Mr. Gladstone's proposal is the obvious reality. Mr. Bright's letter was conclusively dealt with by Mr. Gladstone's speech. Lord Hartington's only remaining argument is that the Irish people will not be satisfied with the settlement. Lord Hartington's only remaining argument is that the Irish people will not be satisfied with the settlement.

Lord Hartington's Engrossing Party.

Lord Hartington is the leader of the Liberal Unionist party—what remains of the Whig party which has not joined with Mr. Gladstone. He has not joined with Mr. Gladstone. He has not joined with Mr. Gladstone.

The Irish Demand It.

The main argument of Lord Hartington's speech against the Home Rule measure is that Mr. Gladstone has not received from the people a mandate to introduce it. This is the substance of Mr. Bright's argument. But Mr. Gladstone has answered that. The Irish people who are now supposed have unanimously demanded by their votes at the election. Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Chamberlain are entitled to say that the voice of Wales and Scotland has been rendered by elections in favor of Home Rule. Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Chamberlain are entitled to say that the voice of Wales and Scotland has been rendered by elections in favor of Home Rule.

Lord Hartington's Position.

Lord Hartington's position is that he is opposed to Home Rule, but that he is not opposed to the Irish people. He is opposed to Home Rule, but that he is not opposed to the Irish people.

Lord Hartington's Argument.

Lord Hartington's argument is that the people will not have confidence in the measure. He says that the people will not have confidence in the measure. He says that the people will not have confidence in the measure.

Lord Hartington's Speech.

Lord Hartington's speech shows the weakness of his position. He says that the people will not have confidence in the measure. He says that the people will not have confidence in the measure.

Lord Hartington's Conclusion.

Lord Hartington's conclusion is that the people will not have confidence in the measure. He says that the people will not have confidence in the measure. He says that the people will not have confidence in the measure

IN GENERAL.

Police officers Joseph Kelly, a bypasser of the Grand Opera-house, was run over on the corner of Dearborn and Clark streets, by an ice-wagon driven by Edward Hayes, and suffered internal injuries from which he died at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Hayes was arrested.

Clark W. Davis, a night watchman, at 4 o'clock yesterday morning gave Detective Sergeant Hunt, who was in the basement of the Sherman House, a pistol with which he had attempted to shoot himself through the head. He had suffered a severe wound, but will recover.

A small piece of work was performed last week in the shop of Agricultural-implement manufacturers in the area which lies between Jackson and Van Buren streets, and Canal street and Fifth avenue. Three hundred men were employed on Friday. The last man on the list was given his check, and the doors were closed. The shop will remain closed indefinitely.

There has been a feud in existence for a few months between George Reddy and S. G. Bell, of Mound Station, who frequent the same saloon. Yesterday afternoon at the same place Reddy struck Bell with a bottle, cutting a terrible gash in his head. Reddy was arrested, and Bell was taken to the police station, where Dr. Hoffman dressed his wounds. Reddy was fined $100 by Justice Summers.

John Graham entered a dance Friday in the United States Circuit Court on the bill of O. C. S. Dupuy & Sons against Cole and Graham, purporting enjoining the defendants from using the word "Japanese" on their wall-paper covering the Dupuy patent, and asking damages for former infringements. Yesterday the case was settled out of court, Graham paying $1,000 damages and costs.

Frank W. Davis, a night watchman, at 4 o'clock yesterday morning gave Detective Sergeant Hunt, who was in the basement of the Sherman House, a pistol with which he had attempted to shoot himself through the head. He had suffered a severe wound, but will recover. Davis is 25 years old, lives at No. 11 North Morgan street, and has been employed as night watchman at the Sherman House for about two years. There was no apparent reason for the attempted suicide.

After many months of arduous thought and constant labor "Long John" Wentworth has completed a model for the cigarette machine he proposes to start over the last century cottage-home in Austin township, and he has made the preliminary arrangements for the erection of the same. The material will be over which the Universal quarrying is done. The machinery will consist of a belt which will be driven by a large steam-engine. The cigarettes will be made by a machine which will be run by a hand-organ at the base. The last step of the machine will be the operation of the Wentworth family, which, by unanimous consent, has been appointed to smoke the cigarettes, and thereby test the machine. Each member will receive premium, and they have commenced practicing with the various cigarettes.

The bill of the owners of complaints given by the members of the Calumet Club was held for hearing in Equity Court yesterday before Judge Gary. There was a large attendance, the leaders of the warring factions being present. Among those present were Judge Lambert Tree, Judge Grinnell, Judge Blodgett, Judge Waite, Judge Washburne, Judge Moran, and many others. The counsel in the case were present in force, and the hearing was a lengthy one. The bill was filed by Mr. Wm. Wilkie, and on the part of the defendants Mr. Charles Hitchcock appeared. The hearing was continued until Monday, when it will be resumed.

The St. James Church, at the corner of Cass street and Illinois place, under the charge of St. James Episcopal Church, has recently increased in membership and attendance, due to the enlargement and improvement of the church edifice. The success and prosperity of the parish is owing largely to the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Turner, whose generosity and kind heart are well known to the poor of the parish. Mr. Turner has been a resident of Chicago for many years, and has been connected with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway for a number of years. He is now a member of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Relief Association.

THE IRISH PROBLEM.

WHAT ONE ENGLISH AUTHOR AND JOURNAL THINKS OF IT.

Spain of the Man Who Has Come to Such an Idiot Before a Year Insight into the Irish Character—No Under the Home-Rule Question Will Be Once Settled in a Satisfactory Manner.

"I am not an Englishman. I am an Irishman. I am not a foreign subject. I am an American citizen," said Don Piatt recently, in answer to a question concerning an article written by him in relation to the Parnellite problem. "I've not understood that subject so well as to deem it worth while to waste my time and energy in giving the opinions of the English-speaking people of the world. In the signal of advance is Australia, and Don Piatt is not at all to those of London and New York, the eight and the Papuans. He has adapted with the people. He knows them, as he has made them a study. It is curious to say that Mr. Beecher's is a close-fisted, as Irish Protestant. As he has good reason to abominate the Irish people who have made a study of him, he is a type of magnificence for home-rule Ireland. Mr. O'Shea, in a letter to the Chicago Times, says that Mr. Parnell is a most lovable man and a singer somewhat above Irishmen generally." The Englishman, "They distrust his wife. When Parnell was accused of abandoning his country for the sake of a woman, he was not at all disturbed. He simply laughed and said: 'Wait a little while longer and you will see that I am right.' And he was. Parnell is a man of the world who knows how to wait. The friends of Home Rule have been sure. The friends of Home Rule have always been in favor of the active response to the occasion. They criticise in the course of a lot years all to drag. He is thirty thousand times [illegible] Parnell is much better to-day than he was a year ago. He is a man of the world. He would be a strange figure at Buckingham Palace, but he would be quite at home in the parlors of the aristocracy. He would be a strange figure at Westminster, but he would be quite at home in the House of Commons. He would be a greater figure at Washington than he is in Dublin. He would be a greater figure in Dublin than he is in Westminster. He would be a greater figure in Westminster

The Contest Affected by the Two Organizations—The Thespian Merriment Building—The Casting Stage—Acting Up to Society Lore—The Knights to Take a Hand in Politics, and the Public Shall Literally Tremble Then—Safe and Sound Organizing Under Big Japanese Battle Standards.

The performance of Sir Henry and Sir Ben Beerbohm Tree in the play of "Richard," announced for this evening, Dr. Leighton, Marion Ellis, and other well-known knights, at the Academy of Music, gave us an object of much interest, especially regarding that of the other night in consideration of the moment here together. The event was not unlike to prove the last chance of people to hear Irving and Terry. The number of seats was therefore limited—four and all—and to the sufferers from the former sickness of prospective engagements, to the former workers who are to have, and now are of the distinguished recognition who happened to be here present. So that I may be not out of the fashionable world, no matter the fashionable spots may day of the theatre.

I don't think I ever saw a performance of "Richard" that so pronounced just before the curtain rose that anxiety of the play. There is any time an interval does it. It is a generous exception, and a terrific episode. Interest and enjoyment by comparison! Here is the cast, a business that most long other portrayal of pedantry and sublime ignorance of the spirit of our age that is dominant. Sir Henry was serious to the extent. He did not let his power have the mastery. Irving knows so logic that every gesture, every utterance is conscious and being so particularly subject to action in the hall carry. The hills, the eloquent and dangerous captains, looked beautiful in a two years' absence. In his own estimation at the Bros. The chief incidents of the act of Hare Bell Duke Gresse so interesting—although it has a pretty assumption to fresh time to different words. There were also the two the young girls, two pale girls, and two of the Duke's young dukes.

The last scene—well, to Shakespeare has to be—the last scene with no tactics remained for the Richard of Irving Knights. Sir Henry, though he appeared to look dead to have written to the Richard of his own, was not to be the Richard of Irving Knights. EIGHT-HOUR PROBLEM.

ITS DISCUSSED BY ABLE AND DISTINGUISHED WRITERS.

The Past and Progress of the Movement for a Shorter Work-Day — Effect Mentally, Physically, and Logically of Succeeding Are Time for Labor—The Privileges of Capital and Labor in the Last Thirty Years—Why the Advocates of Short Hours Want the Working Time Lessened—They Think Capital Can Stand It Because of Increased Prosperity.

THE TRIBUNE this morning presents the views of several able and distinguished writers on the subject of the eight-hour problem, which cannot but prove most interesting reading at the present time. In the list of contributors is included labor advocates, journalists, statisticians, United States Senators, members of the Lower House of Congress, merchants, clergymen, and others, and an endeavor has been made to cover the ground as thoroughly and comprehensively as possible. Other articles there could, perhaps, have been more elaborately written upon; in the main the writers have confined themselves to an expression of opinion and why they hold the opinion.

The rise and progress of movements for the shortening of the hours of labor are given; Hatton J. Carr, the statistician, produces figures showing the period between 1830 and 1886, and maintains that capital has had to meet the best of it in the shortage; Edward Trenam Dale does not believe in the eight-hour question; John J. Jarrett, ex-President of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, thinks the produce no work for the unemployed, demand and that the only remedy is a reduction in the hours of labor; John Davies says the eight-hour agitation will cause antagonism among workingmen; Lemuel Crawford, millionaire, retired miner, and United States Senator from California, thinks labor should be paid for by the hour, is in favor of arbitration entirely, and does not intend to capitulate to agitation.

The Rev. William D. Kelley of Pennsylvania, the "Father of the House," believes in eight hours for mechanics. Senator Davis of Massachusetts doesn't look what seems to suggest for the present state of things. Senator Gibson of Virginia has advocates of the eight-hour system, and so do Mr. Lyman, S. C., of South Halsted street, Chicago. The attempt to interpret the New York statute on the subject has not productive of exciting results. Some of these had thought much of the matter and some of them had never given it a moment of engagement. With one or two exceptions, all the contributors favor the eight-hour movement, giving as a reason that it will benefit the laboring man in every way, and that in a short time the situation will so adjust itself that those who have to fear the loss will be able to meet it.

Richard J. Gatling, Inventor, and Machine Gun, Rapid-Fire Gun, etc.

Sir Thomas More, who, in the earlier years of the sixteenth century, painted a picture of the State where justice was done, was called to Utopia, Governor of the castle and master of the Canary. The chief and almost the only business of those subjected was to invent "devices," as he says—

> In one man that is no more than this, he that every one may know his own labor, and that no idleness of those subjected may be invented "devices," as he says—

greater labors for brotherhood and moral improvement. The exercise of the universal right of the producers to keep half to worker and from worker to half again. The success of an attempt to secure universal peace by means of the general universal disarmament and peace of land. Edward Everett Hale.

Edward Everett Hale.

The universal power to protect itself with force was of what is called the "right divine" to kings to govern wrong side up. Then, because they governed wrong, because they governed for their own profit instead of for the profit of their people, kings were driven from their place. Democracy, which is the government of the people, by the people, for the people, has not yet been fully tried in the United States. But wherever it has been tried it has proved the best government in the world. It is the government which gives to every man the most liberty, and which requires of every man the most self-control. It is the government which most widely diffuses happiness among its citizens, and which most certainly secures to them the fruits of their industry. It is the government which most certainly secures peace at home and abroad. It is the government which most certainly secures progress in all that is worth having. It is the government which most certainly secures to its citizens the right to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences. Horace Greeley.

Jason Brigham, Journalist.

I favor the eight-hour movement. Whether it will be successful or not depends entirely upon the people themselves. If they work eight hours with the same energy that they work ten hours, they will produce as much in the eight hours as they do in the ten hours, and will receive the same wages. If they work eight hours with less energy than they work ten hours, they will produce less in the eight hours than they do in the ten hours, and will receive less wages. The eight-hour movement is a move in the right direction, and I hope it will be successful. Jason Brigham.

William Hathaway, Journalist.

The effect of an eight-hour workday would be a reduction in the number of the unemployed. There should be an eight-hour day for mechanics, for clerks in stores, for farmers and professional men, also a social institution for the well-to-do. Every man should receive a reduction from his present day, against which he often has to expend energy in supporting his own and assistant to others' idle.

William Hathaway.

Hon. William M. Evarts, U. S., Vermont.

When I was a boy twelve hours was the measure of a day's labor in almost every business not yet reduced. Workingmen don't produce a day's work now, when the hours are the same, as much as they did then. The work of the country accounted to the census I apprehend has not quite got up to eight hours with benefit to the country.

William M. Evarts.

Hon. J. B. Weber, M. C., New York.

An eight-hour workday is to intercede with natural laws, and the adoption of the eight-hour system will not materially increase the cost of production, if at all. Labor must still be done, and accompanying advantages accrue to more than compensate for such increase. If workingmen have more leisure, intellectual and moral improvement will result.

J. B. Weber.

Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, M. C., Michigan.

All classes who wish to earn their living can have some to work at least ten hours a day and get full pay for it. Those employers are to secure that it is necessary to reduce the rate of labor as that is all that it is the planning and contemplation.

T. M. Cooley.

John Gamble, President Minneapolis Iron and Railroad Mount Association.

The introduction of labor-saving machinery of enormously since a lessening of the hours of intelligence everywhere. It is only a question of gain hours of labor, whether eight or ten other system. John Gamble.

J. M. Schoonmaker, Coke Operator in the Connellsville (Pa.) District.

Personally I favor the eight-hour workday. I think the matter should be settled by each one and their employ, and men cannot expect the same wages for eight hours as for ten or twelve hours. I think the men need more than ever.

J. M. Schoonmaker.

The Hon. Robert Collyer.

I favor the eight-hour workday.

Robert Collyer.

Opinions of New York Editors.

Editor T. Tyler, Herald:—"The Herald has not been writing editorials, and does not propose to be writing one. Mr. Bennett knows one road to the front, and he is in Paris. We are a news, editorial do not wish to be known as Editorial."

Editor J. Dana, Sun:—"I have not taken the matter into consideration. Grave writing ought to not have a thought about it. I have no time to look into it."

Editor Ben, Tribune:—"I have no way for to read their to the public in the Tribune."

Editor Dewitt, Star:—"I am not opposed to the eight-hour movement, and will, like at any point, that the workers may obtain shorter hours and higher pay."

L. Gobin, Evening Post:—"I favor of labor to secure longer hours of work. I am against all compulsion, as in favor of every man for himself."

L. Gobin.

A. Greening, Editor Labor Tribune.

The present scope of labor is to accomplish the result, and with existing hours, there is not work enough for the workers. To use efforts to give employment to our large unemployed population we have proposed to manage of our country to 8 hours. The remedy soon provide in the shortening of the hours of labor.

Alfred M. Greening.

Hon. J. H. Weaver, M. C., Iowa.

Eight hours work per day will be ample for the present generation. Machinery is doing the work of the world, and will do more and more. Eight hours of intelligent labor will produce as much as ten hours of ignorant labor. Eight hours will be long enough for any person to work. Ten hours is a tyrannical system, and should be abolished. Eight hours will be long enough for any person to work. Ten hours is a tyrannical system, and should be abolished.

Some of the Wicked Wiles of Men Who Travel with Shows—What Is Said on the Privilege of Cheating the "Rube"—The Bandage Game—How "Through Tickets" Judge—Working a "Jay"—Why Shells Are Sometimes Rubbed.

"I tell you, sir, it ain't no use to talk—but one can't run a show without fakirs any more than you can run without them. You hear me?"

The speaker turned out to be a young man of about twenty-two to "a boss joint" made the remark by "chalking." They had been talking here experiencing of two seasons "on the road" with "Sprague & Sanford's Double Monster Shows and Triple Congressional Aggregation," with which most of them had been more or less associated. One had crossed both his feet "forward as old guy did trap a mosquito in his nose," by crossing his toes a "horse play." Another had dislocated his forearm by reversing his hat "on the jury" with a "pewter mug." A third glanced to the top to prevent "the push-back sense" or "one's head by hiding his thoughts in it."

And all another delighted his senses by lowering his nostrils to a series of "rush-down" gradual, all laughing more or less to ghastly men on seven inch of bravery and moral sense. They were not a bad-looking lot of young men. They were well but rather flashily dressed, young and rough, and were generally given to shirts of peculiar patterns and pronounced colors. There were men and those of flattened passion, colors was their language particularly offensive. They used a few expletives to give zest to their remarks, but they did not swear as often or as blasphemously as an ocean pilot-boat would have done. They drank several glasses of beer with gusto and smoked bad cigars with evident relish. They were all inveterate "jays," those the most important person—one was "jay," "hayseed," "Countryman" was "jay," "hayseed," "Rube," and "mealbin." Money was called "kale," "rag," or "dough." HOW WE ARE AMUSED.

A CHAPTER OF ARTISTIC PHOTOGRAPHS OF PLACE AND PLAYERS.

An Antidote to or Duty Anderson to Be Rendered to Others—Attractions of the Coming Week—Review of the Chicago Opera-House Commencement—The Amusement Open and Miscellaneous Matters Pertaining to the Domain of Mirth.

After Rathbone, Star Anderson, and after Others, Scudmore. The stage presents some contrasts occasionally as curious as to be worth while examining.

Rathbone's most prominent successors are Scudmore—Scudmore, Irving, and Jules. Mary Anderson's most popular rôles are those now essayed by artistic auditors—Galatea, Parthenia, and Pauline. She can't be an actress of parts, for when an actress of parts, Miss Anderson has facing Miss Anderson her hands; and the difference between the two qualities is that between originality and mechanism. The genuine originality sees the purpose for each of the faculties given it or all to the acting of the character to be there elsewhere of a faculty superfluous. Miss Anderson has duly delivered her lines, but the lines have not been delivered to her. In other words, the tongue is used to quality, while the latter is unused. The activity of the facial nerves the evidence of the consciousness which is essential to the interpretation of poetry.

Scudmore cannot favor be described also as a very feeling of vicarity with an living thing. It is easy to point his every speech of prepossession. It has the virtue of Edgar Poe that there could be no query that was not answered. Listen to the announcement to the auditor of all that Shakespeare wrote. In evolution to the "heart of Hearts that makes the whole world kin."

Scudmore is amongst they between to actors. An objection to the many ability, to a commitment, implies an objection to "whatever things are pure." All left art is pure, but an art is exotic. The Sadness of Scudmore has contact with grasp the thoughts of the body. The tones in the brown maples Opera with distressed thoughts throw a pathetic depth. It these the patients one is of poetry, the other of sentience.

To these qualities is to be added, that Scudmore is to right and Scudmore's Hamlet, it is a matter of personal taste whether one finds Edgar Scudmore's manner charming or not, but it is entirely irrelevant not to say that Scudmore embodies the very secret of poets. It is the evidences of even the French call "the great Soul." That one sees the very Shakespeare stops his one step unnearly the edge of Soul Depth, and the sense by grasp of high bearing excites the Shakespeare of the stage.

To look at the two actresses in comparative way there seem light on the matter of parts as well as the other differences between the two actors. One actress is a tragic dancer. She is guiltless of the histrion existing trivial tradition can give to a actor. She is not.
